Law School Court to Begin Appellate Arguments Today

Arguments in appellate moot court will begin this afternoon at 2 in the Law School court room. There will be two arguments each afternoon except the last session, April 30, when there will be only one argument. The sessions are open to the public.

J. Francis Cotter, former law clerk for the late U. S. Supreme Court Judge Butler, is in charge of the sessions. After the death of Judge Butler, Mr. Cotter was associated with the Department of Justice in Washington, D.C. until he retired. For the past four years he had returned to the University each spring to take charge of the appellate moot court.

An appellate court differs from a trial court in that there is no jury. The cases are appeals from previous decisions. In actual court there are from three to nine judges. The moot court will have three judges, Mr. Cotter, Gardner Cromwell, associate professor of law and the third judge will be a different senior law student each day. The moot court will sit as the U.S. Supreme Court for the junior arguments and as the Montana Supreme Court for the freshmen arguments.

This week the arguments will be presented by the juniors and will deal with U. S. constitutional law. They will debate appeals dealing with paying dues to unions, the law which forbids discrimination in employment on grounds of color, questions of movie censorship and character requirements of admission to the bar.

The freshmen will conduct the arguments next week. They will deal with domestic relations law and will argue cases dealing with divorce, annulment, adoption of children and parental responsibility.

The arguments will be presented with the theory that a trial has been held and a judgment has been entered. The person against whom the judgment was entered is appealing.

The juniors are to argue with two men to a team and each man is allowed 15 minutes. The freshmen argue with only one man to a side and are allowed 20

Board Approves Venture's Budget

Publications Board decided yesterday to support Venture's $1,989 budget for next year. This will allow for a circulation of 2,000, Penny Wagner, a member of the board, said.

A reserve fund of $55 was approved to be used if necessary for additional pages, she explained.

The Venture staff is looking into the possibility of having a patron's page instead of selling ads. Such a page would list all those who contributed to the magazine's production, she said.

Tonight Last Opportunity To Register for Contest

Tonight will be the last opportunity to register for the intramural debate contest, which will be April 25-29.

All students interested are asked to attend the Debate and Oratory Club meeting tonight at 7 in LA 24. The contest will be organized and a schedule drawn up.

The question to be debated will be "Resolved: That Congress should be given the power to reverse decisions of the Supreme Court."

NEW SCHOLARSHIP—Mrs. Dorothy Rochon Powers hands a check for $1,000 to Dean Nathan B. Blumberg to be used for five journalism scholarships. The scholarships are to be awarded in coming years to graduates of Anaconda High School.

Dorothy Powers Presents Check For Scholarships

Mrs. Dorothy Rochon Powers, Spokane newspaperwoman and a 1943 journalism graduate has presented a check for $1,000 to the School of Journalism.

She asked that the money be used to provide five $200 scholarships in coming years to graduates of Anaconda High School who wish to major in journalism at the University. Mrs. Powers is a graduate of Anaconda High School.

The check, presented to Dean Nathan B. Blumberg, is the one she received earlier this year when she won the National Ernie Pyle Memorial Award. She is the first woman to win this award.

The new award will be known as the C. G. Rochon Scholarship in Journalism, in honor of Mrs. Powers' father, who died in 1944. Mr. Rochon was clerk of School District No. 10 in Anaconda for several years and encouraged many high school students to continue their education at the University.

The scholarship will be awarded on the basis of high school academic record, professional promise in journalism and financial need. It will be paid in three installments during the recipient's freshman year.

Mrs. Powers said she hopes the first award will be made at the Anaconda High School commencement, so that the recipient may enroll in the School of Journalism next fall.

Anti-Government Rioters Battle Police in Street Fights of Seoul

SEOUL, Korea (UPI) — Die-hard anti-government rioters battled police yesterday after a day and night of bloody street fighting which held President Syngman Rhee a virtual prisoner in his Presidential Palace.

Rhee was holding a Cabinet meeting as the demonstrators began and for hours he and other government leaders virtually were besieged in the building.

Government troops and armored cars firing at point blank range rolled them back with heavy casualties but the mobs attacked again and again. Two Americans were known to have been injured.

Authorities at six major Seoul hospitals reported at 9:30 p.m. yesterday that at least 81 persons were known dead and 300 seriously injured.

Meanwhile, the United States appealed yesterday to the South Korean government and anti-government demonstrators to settle "justifiable grievances" without further bloodshed. The State Department endorsed and repeated a strong sentiment issued in Seoul by U. S. Ambassador Walter McCaughy.

Who Runs the University?

Tom Farrington's letter today puts the Kaimin in a position which needs clarification.

His objection to Tuesday's editorial is all right, if he believes "extremely opinionated editorializing" is bad. This is the purpose of an editorial page.

The last sentence of Farrington's letter, "Perhaps the only newspaper legally allowed on campus should listen to the wishes of the students as well as those expressed by the administration," is not true.

First, there is nothing legal about having a newspaper on campus. The tabloid which appeared last quarter, The Critic, edited by Tom Mongar, proves this.

And the Kaimin has heard both the administration's side and Mongar's. Mongar sat in the Kaimin office for an hour on Monday.

What the Kaimin did not point out in Tuesday's editorial is that Mongar is the power behind the proposed constitution, the proposed petition, the United Students Party and Farrington himself. Farrington plans to run for ASMSU president—an office that will be abolished by the constitution change which Farrington supports.

Mongar also has a throat-hold on the administration. If his petition goes through, decreasing student athletic fees $5, the athletic department will be in chaos. President Newburn's new athletic policy will collapse.

So if the Kaimin has listened to the administration, it has been for the sake of the students and not the United Student Party.

Venture Editor Tells Magazine's Policy

To the Kaimin:

I believe that students might be interested in knowing, apart from its financial problems, something of what exactly Venture is, what its aims and standards are, what, if any, are its accomplishments, and what, finally, is its value to the University.

In general, campus magazines fall into two specific types—the humor magazine and the serious magazine. Most examples of the former devote themselves to tickling the reader with a feather in exactly those places where he most enjoys being tickled. They are, in short, slight monuments to beer busts past and future, the student as flunker of tests and insatiable lover, the professor as the eternal bespectacled clown whose sole function is to be the dupe of his wonderfully clever students.

If Venture is the latter type of magazine it is only because those, at MSU, who wish to write, wish to write seriously.

Now what can a serious magazine expect of itself and of those who contribute to it? Only that the material submitted and published be written honestly and well.

In being honest, there is always the possibility of offending some reader at points where a real or assumed difference of opinion can arise. Consequently, you are not loved by everyone all of the time. In attempting to write well, you quite frankly court disaster because, although a substantial privacy can be constructed with little difficulty, great skill and some luck are involved in building a house that is large and beautiful. If you fail, you easily appear ridiculous.

In the March, 1957 issue of MSU's Alumni News, an excerpt from a review of Venture by Dr. Walter N. King was included.

"Students on this campus should be proud of the magazine and eager to present themselves in it. After seven years of discouraged dipping into the Yale literary magazine, I haven't the slightest doubt that student writing at MSU is not inferior to that published on other campuses. The still tentative productions of our fledgling writers can stand up to far tougher criticism than I have offered here, and this cannot always be said for the languid imitations of Hemingway, Faulkner and Truman Capote which lately blossomed in the gray-flannel atmosphere of the Ivy League."

This fall Venture was contacted by Willard Colston, a graduate of MSU and now the managing editor of the Chicago Review, which publishes such people as Henry Miller, William Barret, Jack Kerouac, James T. Farrell, and MSU's Leslie Fiedler. Mr. Colston proposed that Venture and the Chicago Review exchange magazines. I quote from Mr. Colston's letter: "I also have in mind the possibility that we might be able to either reprint fiction which appears in Venture, or solicit other material from your contributors who appear most promising. Frankly we have one hard time finding quality fiction; and the stories I remember from Venture are better than most we receive."

It is such writing that Venture carries to almost seventy colleges and universities in the USA, Canada and Alaska, behind the Iron Curtain to Russia, to such diverse places as Pakistan, the Philippines and Australia. And if Venture, in its travels, makes only a few aware of what, otherwise, they might not realize; namely, that in Montana there is a university where sincere intellectual and creative endeavor is honored—and our correspondence indicates that, in some measure, Venture has done this—then I believe Venture, in its capacity, has served the University and need not be considered a weak sister to the other enterprises that the University supports.

Farrington Refutes Kaimin's Editorial

To the Kaimin:

About the editorial in Tuesday's edition, I would like to make some observations about statements in it which are either false or invalid.

To begin, in the third paragraph you state that Tom Mongar's reason for petitioning for a $5 athletic fee cut is "because of the athletic policy." This is not true. I signed the petition before Pres. Newburn announced his new de-emphasizing policy.

In your conclusion, it states, "cutting students fees . . . which were voted in without any questions last year . . ." to me is extremely opinionated editorializing without a reporter's knowledge of student opinions and feelings.

The first issue I heard about upon returning to campus after a two-year absence was this athletics fee increase. The views expressed were that "last year, an unjust increase in student athletic fees was ramrodded through." Since then, I have been talking to various students and the attitudes are still the same. Furthermore, some people express the opinion that the "vote count was questionable." I don't know.

Where there is smoke there is fire and this case is red hot. It started last year and still remains showing that, as an issue, it has validity.

In getting the question on the ballot as a referendum, it took 450 signatures which represents about 15 per cent of the total student body and about 25 per cent of the normal voting students.

This the Kaimin seems to overlook when expressing opinions as editorials. Perhaps the only newspaper legally allowed on campus should listen to the wishes of the students as well as those expressed by the administration.

Giardello Gets Long Denied Championship Shot Tonight

BOZEMAN (UPI)—Joey Giardello, one of boxing's bad boys, gets a long denied title chance today, and the Brooklyn middleweight is confident that he won't miss cashing in against NBA middleweight champion Gene Fullmer.

"I've got peace of mind," he said "for the first time since maybe 1954. I've got determination to win. I'm in the best shape I've been in for maybe five years, and I don't see how I can lose."

Giardello, 29, twice previously lost chances at the middleweight crown. Once he withdrew from a bout with champion Carl "Bobo" Olson because an injured knee stiffened up.

The second time, in 1954, he wasn't permitted to go through with an Olson fight because he was under charges of assault and battery. He eventually served nearly four months of a six to one month sentence in the case.

Lot of Troubles

"I've had a lot of troubles," Giardello said. "Some of them not by my own doing. I didn't hit that guy in Philadelphia. I swear I didn't."

Some of his other troubles stemmed from his ring activity. In 1952 he had to file suit to confirm a victory over Billy Graham. The suit followed action by New York boxing commissioners changing a card to give Graham the decision. In 1957 after Willie Vaughn was given a split decision over him, the boxing commission found one score card incorrectly marked and ruled the contest "no decision."

There were other cases for traffic violations, disorderly conduct and minor offenses. But Giardello now is not the fighter of six years ago, mentally at least.

Physically he may be the equal, maybe better. "I weigh 158½ today," he said. "That's the best weight I've had in maybe seven years."

Giardello Confident

"I've fought guys like Fullmer before. I know his style, and he won't change it. I hope he tries to outbox me, but he wouldn't do that. He might confuse me for one round, but I've been around long enough to catch on in that time."

Giardello, who has lost 17 times in 10 fights, said he has "never worked harder" to get ready for a fight. "I've boxed over 100 rounds and done over 100 miles of roadwork. I've been training for 10½ weeks, and usually I trained for two."

For the last three and one-half weeks, he's been working out at Livingston and he's become the favorite of the 10,000 citizens. "If prayers will be any good," he said, "I can't lose. These people have been sending me Rosaries and religious mementos and praying for me."

Fullmer Favored

Fullmer, who will be defending his national boxing title not recognized in New York and Massachusetts, was a 5-2 favorite despite Giardello's optimism.

He won the world crown previously with a decision over Sugar Ray Robinson, then lost it when Robinson knocked him out in a return match, the only time he has ever been stopped. He won NBA recognition Aug. 28 when he stopped Carmen Basilio in 14 rounds and defended successfully once, a 15-round decision over Spider Webb Dec. 4.

Maki Baffles PDT Hitters

The relaxed, sometimes annoyingly slow, pitching of Ken Maki completely baffled Phi Delta Theta hitters yesterday as Sigma Alpha Epsilon took a very important 4 to 1 win in fraternity softball action.

The victory left SAE undefeated and in first place in the league. They now have a 4 to 0 record. PDT stands at 4 and 1.

SAE scored all of their runs in the first inning off the pitching of Gaylord Guenin. They scored on a walk, four hits and an error. Howie Hansen opened SAE's scoring with a bases loaded double and the PDT error allowed the two other runs to cross the plate.

Lee Proter relieved Guenin after the first inning and managed to stop the SAE attack.

Maki's pitching held the Phi Delt's in check until the third inning when one runner scored on a double by Joe Johnston. His hit was the first of the two lone hits the Phi Delt's managed to collect.

In other games the ATO nine downed SN 6 to 5 in a tight defensive contest. Both teams gained their runs in single inning rallies. SN in the first and the ATO's in the second inning. Dale Lumbson was the winning pitcher.

TX took a 7 to 4 victory from SPE. The TX pitcher, George Knee, and their cleanup hitter, Gary Fink, both hit successive home runs in the third and fourth innings. Knee was the winning pitcher and Reno Parker took the loss.

In the last game yesterday the SX blasted PSK 19 to 9.

Outlook Good for New Group

Friends of Library to Present Progress Report for Last Fall

The Friends of the Library will present a progress report, dating from their organization last fall quarter, in Liberal Arts 205 tomorrow at 7:30 p.m.

The meeting is open to all students and faculty interested in the group's activities, according to Terry Carpenter, student member of the organization's board of directors. She said that copies of the group's statement of purpose would be distributed at the meeting.

In addition to the statement, a report on the group's financial condition will be presented. Ludwig Browman, professor of zoology and faculty member of the board of directors, said that as of April 1, the group had $196. He added that he understood Central Board had allocated $50 to the group.

Dr. Browman said he believed the Library Friends would "break even" financially. He said that the group's expenses to date had included stationary, mimeographing and one mailing. He said that another mailing was planned soon.

Both Dr. Browman and Miss Carpenter expressed optimism concerning the group's future. Miss Carpenter said that the University's endowment foundation under the direction of Robert Pantzer, University executive vice president, had contributed greatly to the success of the project. She added that Mr. and Mrs. Robert Crane, Jordis Erickson and the Spurs had also aided the group in compiling a mailing list. University typing classes addressed the group's letters to alumni and non-alumni in Montana.

Miss Carpenter said the group's present plans call for an annual meeting next fall, close to homecoming. She said at that time a permanent board of directors would be selected for the organization.

She added that the group is presently investigating the possibility of purchasing certain manuscripts for sale in Montana. She declined to mention any specific works. She said the Library Friends hope to present the Library with new books or other library materials before the end of the school year.

The publicity program for the Library Friends, Miss Carpenter said, would be greatly augmented if individual students could be encouraged to discuss the group's work among their friends and in their home towns. She said that current plans call for the incorporation of such a plan in the group's publicity program.

The present organization of the Library Friends consists of a board of directors and individual members. The directors are divided into three parts, student, faculty and members outside the University community.

Student directors are Miss Carpenter, Pat Shaw and Gary Beiswanger; faculty directors are Dr. Browman, P. Earl Miller, professor of history and Jacob Vinocur, assistant professor of English.

Other directors are Mrs. C. H. Clapp, Mr. Arthur Deschamps Jr., Mr. Paul Gillespie, Mr. Tom Haines, General W. M. Johnson, Mrs. W. M. Johnson, Mrs. Jack Lubrecht, Mr. Grant MacLay and Mrs. Frank Shaw.

Student and faculty board members of the board have no vote.
